The King of Prussia Historical Society has been meticulously investigating the captivating history behind the Moore-Irwin House, a multi-part mansion that has been owned by Upper Merion Township since 1972. For years, traditional stories have held that this stately home served as the quarters for General Muhlenberg during the Valley Forge Encampment of 1777-78, with his troops encamped along the nearby Trout Creek.

Join guest lecturer, David Montalvo, president of KOP Historical Society, as he leads a captivating talk delving into the long and storied past of this hidden gem. Discover how the Moore-Irwin House has borne witness to pivotal moments in our nation's history, from its potential role in the Revolutionary War to the ongoing efforts to preserve this architectural and cultural treasure for future generations. This lecture promises to be a fascinating and enlightening journey into the heart of the region's heritage.
