Get ready to be inspired! Guest speaker Catherine Quillman is stepping up to the mic to share the heartwarming saga of how folks from all walks of life have teamed up across generations to preserve the historic battlefield of September 11th, 1777, which stretches its storied grounds through Chester and Delaware Counties.

In the early days, this eclectic crew included everyone from postcard snap-happy photographers and dedicated teachers to state senators and brave war veterans, all doing their part to "save" the battlefield—whether it was by shining a spotlight on its history or throwing a grand anniversary bash!

Catherine isn't just any speaker; she's a former Philadelphia Inquirer arts reporter and a key player on the boards of the Chadds Ford Historical Society and West Chester Historical Commission. With eight regional histories under her belt, plus a treasure trove of Chester County vintage postcards and early photos, she's got stories that'll make history come alive!

So, mark your calendars and don't miss out —we can't wait to see you there!

Thank you to Duportail House for sponsoring this lecture.
