Join us for a fascinating look at the Battle of Paoli, one of the Revolutionary War's most overlooked—and most brutal—battles. On the night of September 20, 1777, British General Charles “No Flint” Grey led nearly 2,000 men on a surprise nighttime attack against General Anthony Wayne's troops in Malvern. The resulting battle became the ninth bloodiest of the Revolutionary War, opened the way for the British occupation of Philadelphia, and left a lasting legacy in our local community.

Discover the dramatic story behind the battle—and why “Remember Paoli” became America's first battle cry.

An avid history buff, Jim Christ serves as President of the Paoli Battlefield Preservation Fund, Vice President of the American Revolution Round Table of Philadelphia, Vice President of the Brandywine Valley Civil War Round Table, and a Board Member of the Chester County 250th Committee, among other roles. Jim is married and lives in West Whiteland Township, Chester County, on land that was once part of the Revolutionary War's Battle of the Clouds battlefield.
